

Interiors

Think small

Away from the high street and the sweeping search engines, small designers are quietly grafting away, conjuring up all sorts of stand-out pieces, from kitsch salt-shakers to Zen-style baths, says Kasia Maciejowska

Top draw

With her background in Parisian fashion, it's little surprise that Françoise Fredj Weill's furniture is couture-like in its use of particular materials, attention to detail, and price tag. This table top is filled with Henri Rocher drawing pastels.

£12,500

london.com

Hanging gardens

Maggie Williams works in Cornwall from her studio, The Glass Plant. Her hanging Eden vases are elegant tall jugs modelled on the aptly titled and carnivorous pitcher plant.

£35 each

maggiewilliamsglass.co.uk
frombritainwithlove.co.uk

Cocktail hour

Maybe it's the neon pink plexiglass's vague resemblance to the title logo for Tom Cruise's hit film that gives this rosy little number its Eighties zing. Greg Kinsella has come up trumps with his G table, designed for serving up disco-style fun.

£7,335

gregkinsella.com

Eco logic

Although made in Devon, William Garvey's Geo Bath is designed for a Japanese-style soak, which means sitting on a little seat, up to your neck in very hot water. He uses teak for its insulating properties and also includes a lid so that the water can retain its temperature for hours.

£3,687

williamgarvey.co.uk

Class

The Bath by Maggie Williams is on sale at the Glass Plant summer fair in Norway. Sunderland is researching waterjet technology for her Ph...
£1,900
www.b...

Work Here...

Escape the 9 to 5 and the smoke of The City, by living somewhere that takes your breath away.

Live Here

